Rapid City Flood Tragedy Toll Spirals Beyond 200

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — The death toll in the nation's worst flood disaster in 44 years has reached 208, and officials fear many more bodies will be found outside Rapid City in the streams that filter from the nearby Black Hills

Civil Defense officials estimated the missing at 500, and said today that it was impossible to estimate the number of

At least 3,000 persons were left homeless, and damage was estimated at more than $100 million.

Mayor Donald Barnett imposed a 10 p.m. to dawn curfew on the city of 43,000. He halted night search operations by the more than 3,000 civilian volunteers, and said the rescue teams accomplished as much during daylight hours as they did working around the clock.

Sen. George McGovern and Gov. Richard Kneip visited the devastated area Sunday. McGovern called it "incredible destruction," and said he would ask Congress to provide extraordinary relief for his home state if deemed necessary.

Hundreds of persons were innoculated for typhoid and tetanus at the Rapid City High School and the Pennington County Health Department. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare stockpiled 10,000 doses of the innoculations.

Rapid City has been without water since the floods struck, and officials said it will be late tonight before drinkable water is available through city facilities.

Drinking water was delivered by nearby Ellsworth Air Force Base and passed out in pots, cans and kettles at designated locations.

The water cutoff made plumbing facilities inoperable. The natural gas supply also was cut off but telephone service was restored.

The Office of Emergency Preparedness. Small Business Administration. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Office of Economic Opportunity and federal housing agencies sent disaster teams to Rapid City on Sunday to begin assisting the victims.

The disaster was the worst ever in South Dakota. A winter blizzard in 1888 killed more than 100 persons. The worst flood in U.S. history was in Johnstown, Pa., in 1889 when 2 200 were killed.

In 1938, floods spawned by hurricanes claimed 1.836 lives in southern Florida.

David Heraty, 17, said a brother and a friend came home Friday night and warned a flood was coming. He gave this account of what happened:

"We thought he was kidding. We just sat there, and pretty soon this big bunch of water came down the creek. We ran next door and the next thing I knew it was up to my neck

Pretty soon the top of a house came floating by and we grabbed onto that. A little ways downstream we got off and climbed on to the roof of a neighbor's house, where we stayed all night.

The establishments are checked for the condition of food, food protection, health and disease control, food equipment and utensils, water supply, sewage disposal, plumbing, toilet facilities, hand-washing facilities, garbage and rubbish disposal, vermin control, floor, ceiling and wall construction, lighting, ventilation, dressing rooms, lockers and general housekeeping.

Brown said this was the first city inspection to be completed since a stricter city sanitary code went into effect last November. The code currently complies with all standards established by the Missouri Department of Health. Three of the city's five boroughs were on McGovern's itinerary, the first stop being a tour of Harlem Hospital in Manhattan, accompanied by Coretta King, widow of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Next Tuesday's primary will elect 248 of the state's 278 delegates to the July convention, and a big victory would bring a first-ballot nomination within reach of the South Dakota senator.

The final week of campaigning here follows McGovern's one-day trip Sunday to South Dakota to view the destruction caused by heavy rains and flooding in Rapid City, S.D.

He called it "a scene of incredible destruction and desolation.

McGovern plans to spend six of the remaining eight days before the June 20 primary in New York State. Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, the only other major still-active candidate for the nomination, did not enter the New York contest.

Historic High Court Decision On Rights of Private Clubs

Court today upheld the right of private clubs to exclude Negroes as guests.

The 6 to 3 decision was delivered by freshman Justice William H. Rehnquist. It went against a black brought as a guest to the Moose Lodge in Harrisburg, Pa.

In other action, the court: -Unanimously turned down an appeal by John Patler, convicted of the 1967 sniper slaying of American Nazi party commander George Lincoln Rockwell.

-Agreed to decide whether a criminal suspect has the right to have a lawyer present when police show his photograph to prospective witnesses for identification.

-Allowed Connecticut to hold its state elections this year under a plan a federal court in Hartford said was "unjustified" because of population variations.

-Unanimously upheld a Missouri reapportionment plan, rejecting arguments of state officials who said the plan was drawn up improperly by a district court with "political and nonjudicial criteria" in mind.

The black, Leroy Irvis, the majority leader of the Pennsylvania House, contended that since the club held a liquor license from the state it could not exclude blacks as members or as guests

Today's decision dealt directly with the exclusion of blacks as guests—and not with their exclusion as members. Rehnquist said Irvis could not challenge the Lodge's all-white membership policy since he had

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme never applied for membership, but had distinguished from state conduct." he said. only been brought to the club as a guest.

Rehnquist said the club's refusal to serve Negroes does not violate the 14th Amendment even though the Moose Lodge gets its liquor license through the state.

"Since state-furnished services include such necessities of life as electricity, water, and police and fire protection, such a holding would utterly emasculate the distinction between private as

Defendants Granted 'Right of Counsel'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today granted all defendants who face a possible jail term the right to be represented by a lawyer.

The 7 to 2 decision delivered by Justice William O. Douglas, guarantees a lawyer's help to millions of poor people who are prosecuted for petty offenses and misdemeanors.

Less than half the states now supply free lawyers to defendants in all trials that could lead to a jail term. The historic ruling, an expansion of past Sixth Amendment decisions, will necessarily change trial practices in those states: Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who agreed with Douglas, said he was confident the legal profession would meet the "large new burdens" placed upon it. Justices Lewis F. Powell and William H.

Rehnquist, the court's freshman members, objected to the sweep of the decision although they did not dissent in a technical sense. They said the court should have ruled there is a right to a lawyer only when 'necessary to assure a fair trial. Back in 1963 a case known as Gideon V

Wainwright first laid the principle that a man on trial for "serious offenses" has the right to a lawyer and that if he cannot afford one the state must supply counsel. Until then, the Sixth Amendment had been interpreted as necessitating lawyers only in capital offenses-when there was a chance of a death sentence. Subsequently, the court granted the right to a free lawyer when the jail term could be six months or more. Today's decision wipes out the distinction between felonies and misdemeanors for petty offenses so far as this right is concerned. Unless a defendant knowingly and intelligently waives a lawyer's help, he cannot be sent to prison "for any offense, whether classified as petty, misdemeanor or felony, unless he was represented by counsel at his trial," Douglas wrote.

Demolition Hearing Is Scheduled

A public hearing will be held at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the City Council chambers to determine whether four buildings owned by Mrs. Cecelia Cobb. Dayton, Ohio, should be repaired or demolished and removed.

City Building Inspector Woodrow Garrison said the floors, walls and ceilings of the buildings were deteriorated and the plumbing and electrical fixtures were faulty. "It was generally unfit for human habitation." Garrison said.

Mrs. Cobb refused to correct the situation when Garrison said he formally asked her to do so. Monday's night's meeting, necessitated by Mrs. Cobb's reaction, is being conducted by the City Council rather than the Board of Adjustment because the structures fall in the "dangerous building" category, Garrison explained.

I must say the old sourpuss is missing a lot. One of the happiest weeks of my life was when I had eight house guests plus my own family of five. It was a party, around the clock, with everyone pitching in. The house was filled with laughter. There wasn't a single complaint.

Wife of Auditor In Sedalia Swing

Carolyn Bond, wife of State Auditor Christopher (Kit) Bond who is seeking the Republican nomination for governor, visited Sedalia Monday morning where she toured the Children's Therapy Center and spoke with members of the Pettis County Republican Women's Club at an informal coffee held in the home of Mrs. Paul Hausam, 1207 West Sixth.

Mrs. Bond, who is actively campaigning for her husband by visiting women throughout the state, told the group of 15 here that she feels voters think it is time for a change in state government, and it will take "someone with no strings or obligations" to make the change.

Mrs. Bond, whose husband was elected State Auditor in 1970, said her husband "has proven what can be done in state government." She pointed out two issues in the 1970 campaign, one concerning a lack of professionalism, and told of the accomplishments made in his office since the election.

"Before Kit was auditor there were 124 people on the state auditor's payroll with only one Certified Public Accountant," she said. "Now there are only 90 on the staff which includes eight CPAs."

In discussing the late election issue of delays in the issuance of county audits, Mrs. Bond told the group that this year 35 county audits will be delivered compared to only 18 before her husband was in office and the cost of the 35 audits is half the cost of the 18, she said, attributing this to the increase in the number of professionals on the auditor's staff.

Mrs. Bond told the group that along with a financial audit, her husband issues a performance audit as a means of hoping to eliminate waste in state government. He can make a recommendation to various state agencies, she said, "but has no power to make the changes." Only the governor can make changes," she said, "and Kit is convinced that the State of Missouri has to have change."

As wife of the governor, Mrs. Bond said there are two things she would like to do. She said she would open the governor's mansion two mornings or afternoons each week for visitors. Presently persons must have special permission to tour the mansion, she said.

Also, Mrs. Bond, who holds a bachelor's

Houstonia Fires Are Reported

(Democrat-Capital Service)

HOUSTONIA — Two rural fires early Sunday morning destroyed a barn at one farm and a grain bin at a neighboring farm about three miles east of here in Pettis County.

Pettis County firemen said the fires apparently were deliberately set. No injuries were reported.

. The fires occurred simultaneously at 2:25 a.m. Sunday at a farm owned by C. K. Parsons and at a farm owned by Mrs. Marshall Parsons. The farms are about a quarter-of-a-mile apart.

Both farms were unoccupied at the time of the incident. The owners do not live on the farms.

Firemen reported 400 bushels of shelled oats in a grain bin and three large walnut trees were destroyed in the fire at the farm

K. Parsons farm, a large barn and a small amount of hay were completely destroyed.

Officials reported both the grain bin and the barn were burned to the ground when the Pettis County firemen arrived. The fires were out put with a booster line.

Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax said law enforcement officials in Houstonia are conducting an investigation of the causes of the fires.

Three fires similar to the Sunday blazes occurred July 4, 1971, in the Houstonia-health.

Mrs. Bond chuckled when asked if this campaign has disrupted her family life. "What family life?" she asked, pointing out that she won't see her husband until Friday. "We have no children, but try to spend one day a week at home together," she said.

When asked what her husband's chances of winning the election are, Mrs. Bond replied, "Excellent. People are ready for a change. During the Bondwagon, we found that voters regard Kit Bond and John Danforth as different and approve of the way they run their offices."

Following her visit here Mrs. Bond flew to Joplin where she was to be on a noon hour women's television program.

A Perfect Combination

AMPLE PARKING

In both our service and our facilities, we combine the best of the modern and the traditional. We see no reason why efficiency and dignity cannot go hand in hand.

AT & T—World's Biggest Money Maker—Seeking More Profits

phone rates are going up in most of the country and American Telephone & Telegraph Co., last year the world's top money maker, is seeking another $1.2 billion in 18 separate cases.

Critics claim the communications giant doesn't need or deserve the money. And depending on where they live, they may also have a harsh word to say about service.

"The reason AT&T needs so much money is because of poor management," says Asher Ende, a Federal Communications Commission attorney appointed to defend the public interest in one rate case. "If regulation merely covers up these mistakes, efficiency doesn't improve.

American Telephone says telephone charges have not kept pace with increases in other consumer prices, while inflation has bitten deeply into earnings. This reduces the attractiveness of Bell System stock and bonds, the company says, making it increasingly difficult to raise money to meet service demands.

"The increases are necessary so we earn enough money to provide first class service," says F. Mark Garlinghouse, an AT&T vice president.

Since 1970, AT&T has boosted its rates some $1.7 billion a vear or 10 per cent. It is now seeking another $1.2 billion a year in 18 separate rate cases around the country.

American Telephone is a giant holding company which owns or participates in 24 separate Bell companies and a long distance division. It operates about 100 million telephones in 48 states, 10 times the number of phones of its nearest competitor, General Telephone & Electronics, and handles about 80 per cent of the nation's telephone calls.

With profits from its manufacturing and research subsidiaries, it netted $2.2 billion in 1971, up 2 per cent from 1970. In comparison, General Motors,

Telephone rates are set by local, state, or federal agencies, which try to strike a balance between consumer demands for reasonable rates and investor requirements for a fair rate of return. The Price Commission has decided to leave rate decisions in the hands of these agencies, within certain guide-

From 1960 through 1971, local telephone charges rose 11 per cent and long distance rates dropped a little over 4 per cent, while consumer prices rose nearly 37 per cent, AT&T claims.

Despite this, the rate of earnings during the first part of the '60s was climbing. Technological improvements, such as conversion to the direct dial system for long distance calling, produced sharp economies.

Telephone usage was increasing at a pace that could be handled, explains one industry analyst. But beginning in 1969, telephone traffic nearly doubled its growth rate from that of the previous couple of years.

To meet the unexpected burst in demand, AT&T pumped vast sums of money into new plant construction. While inflation was rampant and interest rates were soaring, financing expenditures in 1969 jumped 56 per cent as the company gulped down $2.5 billion from bank loans, notes, and bond issues.

Since then, "Ma Bell's" appetite for new money has increased. AT&T raised $4.8 billion in 1971, accounting for about 11 per cent of all the new capital raised from stocks and bonds by American industry.

Interest expenses in 1971 more than tripled 1966 levels. while wage costs among the 24 Bell companies rose 70 per cent, AT&T says. Total ex-seed should begin when five to fifteen per cent of seed are immature. Harvest when more than 20 per cent of the seed is immature usually results in low vields. The excess moisture from immature seed will cause heating in storage, weak seed vigor, and low germination. If seed acreage is large enough to require three or more days to harvest, or delay in obtaining harvest equipment is expected, mowing, windrowing, curing seed in the windrow, and using a combine with pick-up attachment is recommended. With this method, fescue should be mowed at an earlier stage of seed head maturity than with direct combine harvest. Mowing should begin when straw in the head is yellowing. At this stage an occasional seed will shatter from the earliest maturing heads when the stem is tapped below the head. Mower cut should be high enough to leave much of the grass stubble. Place windrow on top of stubble to allow air to circulate and cut drying time. If large acreages of seed and hav are involved, self propelled types of mower and windrowers are desirable. Fescue should be combined as soon as windrows are thoroughly dry Examine chaff from time to time. Don't be fooled by glumes. They contain no seed but make it look as though seed is being blown out. It is wise to consult seed dealers or buyers before harvest. Their ideas can help the producer save more seed and improve quality.

Handling seed to prevent heating after harvest is nearly always a problem. The first step is to clean immediately to remove green material. Special attention will still be needed. Small amounts of harvested seed can be spread out in bins, lofts, etc., to dry. If seed begins to heat, stir or turn it. If temperature in seed is higher than 110 degrees, germination loss will occur. Operators who use drying bins should keep circulating air at the flue entrance below 90 degrees Fahrenheit.

It is important to clip stubble to a height of three inches immediately after seed harvest. This is necessary to develop large numbers of stalks for the next seed crop

Most Protected

For 65 years meat has been the most protected part of the total food supply in this country, says Mrs. Lorene Wilson, University of Missouri-Columbia Extension consumer marketing specialist.

In fact, standards of packing plants and meat processing establishments are considerably higher than those of most home kitchens.

For instance, few kitchens measure up to the following standards meat processors are required to meet

Attention is called to a regulation that gives meat a further vote of confidence for wholesomeness at the market. It is that all meat animals must be inspected by licensed veterinarians before and after slaughter. The veterinarians check the carcass and all internal organs for evidence of disease, physical damage, and Tissue Testing Plant analysis is the best method available for accurately determing if a micro-nutrient deficiency exists. Unless they are actually needed, the application of micro-nutrients is not likely to pay returns, and may be detrimental. In fact, when used on research plots, some micro-nutrient elements have reduced vields.

Sampling is not a difficult proposition and does not take a great deal of time. Complete instructions on sampling procedures and caring for rainfall just moved the crop. samples after they are chemical down into the root Sunlight and temperature collected, are given in MU Guide 9131, "Sampling Plant Tissue and Soil For Analysis.' which is available at University Extension Center and many fertilizer dealers.

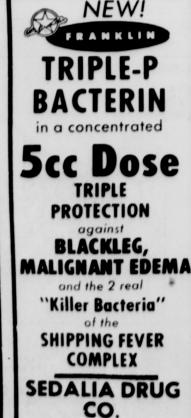

The ideal time to sample corn is just before or at early tassel. Corn should not be sampled after the silks have dried. Just as the first bloom appears is the best time to sample soybeans. Beans should not be sampled after the pods start to fill.

Weed Killer Failure

There is little doubt about the value of herbicides in general. but there is variation in their effectiveness. If there is poor weed control the cause often lies not with the chemical but in the method or time of application or in the weather.

When atrazine is applied to the soil as a pre-emergent treatment, the chemical is moved into the top few inches of the soil by either rain, soil moisture, or light tillage. Once in the soil, it is absorbed by the weeds and grass seedlings.

In the past it was believed that most chemicals were taken in through the roots; however, research indicates that most chemicals are more effective when placed in the shoot zone (the top two inches of soil) than when placed in the root zone. and, it appears the chemical is actually being absorbed into the seedling by that part of the plant growing above the seed. In recent studies, it was found that of eleven major herbicides included in trials all reduced top growth of weeds when placed in the shoot zone. AMIBEN was the only one

Moisture (rainfall) is the key. Formerly it was believed by the chemical to the planted zone and activated it. However, both effect plant growth recent studies indicate another important function of rainfall may be to provide needed moisture so the chemical can be readily absorbed by the plant. The amount of rainfall actually needed isn't known, but best results have been obtained with from 1/4 to 3/4 inch or normal rainfall within a week to ten days of application. When the soil is dry or when no rain is received a few days after application, the chemical is not incorporated into the terminating region, or there isn't enough moisture for it's absorption by the weed and grass seedlings, don't overlook fact that seed bed preparation may have created a local drought in the field. Large amounts of buried trash or long exposure of a loose seed bed to a drying wind and hot sun may leave it very dry while the fields around are reasonably moist. If no rainfall occurs in five days or so after application, it may be beneficial and even necessary to incorporate the herbicide mechanically. Heavy or excessive rainfall on the other hand, may carry the herbicide down past the effective zone, or dilute the

Stakes Offer Many Advantages

There are many advantages to growing tomatoes on stakes. More plants may be placed in a limited space. Fruit is easier to harvest, is larger, cleaner, and free of ground rot. Staked plants also lend themselves to easier insect and disease

Staking, pruning, and tying should be started early and continued as the plant develops, but plants may still be pruned and staked. However, if it is still to be done this year, there is no time to lose.

Wooden stakes about six feet long, made from 1-by-1-by-2 lumber, are easy to use but usually last only one season. More expensive, but longer lasting, are metal stakes such as those purchased from garden centers or made from reinforcing rods used in concrete construction. Place the stakes about four inches from the plant and drive them into the soil at least 10 inches or until they are firm.

Use soft cord, strips of cloth or other soft materials to tie the plant to the stake. Make ties about every 12 inches to give the plant good support and allow at least a half inch of play between the temato stem and stake. Early in the season, while the plant is growing rapidly, tying may be necessary about once a week.

Pruning is most important during June. It may need to be done weekly then. After the plants have set about three or four clusters of fruit, the growth rate will slow down. Less frequent tying and pruning will be needed then.

Single stem pruning is easiest, although two or three stems may be allowed to develop. If more than one stem is wanted. extra stems should be selected from the lowest vigorous side shoots of the plant. Fruit on multiple stems will not usually be quite as early or as large as those from single-stem plants.

Carefully examine tomato plants before pruning. If plants are well developed they may already have several large side

Normally, the main stem should be longer than any of the others. It can be easily followed from the base of the plant. The tip of the main stem should be kept growing at all times. When pruning plants to a single stem, all side shoots should be removed. In the "Missouri Method" of pruning, side shoots are not entirely removed. Instead, they are pinched back to allow two leaves remaining on a stub. This extra foliage permits the plant to manufacture more food. It also shades the fruit to prevent sunburn damage. Remove any shoots that may develop later from the stub.

When a plant reaches the top of a stake, either pinch out the top or allow the top of the main stem to hang down. When the top is allowed to remain, fruit will continue to be produced, although it is usually smaller.

Make sure staked tomatoes get at least one inch of water per week during June. They need as much as two inches per week during July and August. Irrigate if necessary.

Low soil moisture during hot weather leads to development of a problem called blossomend rot. Infected tomatoes develop blackened, depressed spots, but adequate water will usually prevent this condition.

the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — An tries with which the Soviets Agriculture Department report says that over the short run the biggest potential for U.S. agricultural exports to Russia now lies in grains, feedstuffs, and breeding stock-in addition to current shipments of hides, skins and almonds.

'Much of this potential stems from Soviet plans through 1975 to substantially increase the protein portion of the Soviet diet," the report said.

It said that only 8 percent of the diet now is devoted to the consumption of meat and fish, compared to 21 percent of the U.S. diet, while more than half the Soviet diet is devoted to grains and potatoes, compared to 25 percent of the U.S. diet.

In order to improve the protein content of the Russian diet, The Soviet Union is aiming for a 27 percent increase in the production of livestock by 1975," it said.

To do this, better breeding stock is needed. More than 300 U.S. bulls and heifers already have been purchased.

'More grain and oilseeds also probably will be needed, especially in the form of high-energy feeds such as corn or grain sorghum and high-protein feeds such as soybeans or soybean meal. 'We eliminated the cattle fever tick from the United States in 1943. It's our job to make sure it doesn't come back." says Dr. Glen O. Schubert of the inspection service.

As a barrier against cattle fever tick entry, the service maintains a quarantine zone extending 500 miles from the Gulf of Mexico to Amistad Dam near Del Rio, Tex. It varies from a few yards to 20 miles in width. Sixty-five inspectors examine all cattle and horses found within the zone.

ATTENTION RURAL RESIDENTS WATER DISTRICT PROPOSAL

A group of people from the eastern part of Pettis County proposes to form a Public Water Supply District. This District would include an area from Sedalia north to Georgetown, east to Beaman, south to a point 3 miles south of Highway 50 and west to Highway 65. This would mean a city type water system for farmers and residents in this area. The project would be financed by a low interest government loan. Monthly revenue from the sale of water would be used to pay operating cost and debt repayment. Water would be sold through individual meters located on the owners property. The exact water rate cannot be determined until we know number and location of users, however, our engineer has said $7.00 a month is a realistic estimate for an average user. People who are interested can pay an initial connection fee now of $35 to be a water user. The system will be designed for the initial user plus a small reserve for new users. There can be no guarantee of hooking onto the water line later after the system is complete. If the Division of Health will permit new users later, the connection fee will be $300.00. It is of vital importance to farmers and residents of the District area to let the steering committee know now if you want water.

We find that the actual cost of operating a new well, considering electricity, repairs, well depreciation and pump replacement is normally more than paying the monthly water rate to public supply district. The reason we are proposing this District is to assure ourselves, our children and neighbors a good, clean supply of water during the coming years.

Members of the steering committee are trying to contact as many residents as possible in this area. If you haven't been contacted and want water, please get in touch with one of the following members of the steering committee:

Food Stamps Given To Union Strikers

The House will soon take up the agriculture appropriations bill for fiscal year 1973, which will include federal funds for operating the food stamp program.

In 1964 the Food Stamp Act was passed to "make use of food surpluses and to provide improved levels of nutrition among lowincome households." It has grown rapidly over the years, now covering 12 million persons, compared to 3.3 million in 1969. Its budget has zoomed from $115 million in 1967, to $2 billion today.

Still, properly administered, the food stamp program is an effective way of insuring that poor families receive enough food. But there are also serious abuses.

One of the most blatant is the practice of providing food stamps to strikers. It continues because repeated attempts to write an amendment into the food stamp law prohibiting it have been defeated in the House.

food stamps is unfair on the face of it. Here we have the federal government (in reality the One place the House could start taxpayer) subsidizing union this month, however, would be in members who voluntarily walk off writing an amendment to the food their jobs in an effort to win higher stamp law that will take it out of wages and fringe benefits, giving the arena of collective bargaining.

Dr. Herbert Northrup, chairman of the Wharton School of Finance's Labor Relations Council, estimates that strikers will have received $238 million in food stamps during fiscal

Not only are food stamps being abused in this manner, but the whole range of federal public assistance programs is increasingly being exploited by labor to sustain strikes. The Wharton study, "Welfare and Strikes," reveals that unions are relying on food stamps. commodities, welfare benefits, unemployment compensation and other programs to gain leverage in bargaining.

The direct and indirect dollar value of this kind of assistance to strikers will total $365 million by 1973, the study estimates.

Reform is clearly needed. But it Allowing strikers to purchase will take time to close all the loopholes that have upset the scales between labor and management.

Pentagon Fights George McGovern

campaign manager, former Attorney General John Mitchell, is saying publicly that Sen. George McGovern (D.-S.D.) is the man they most want to run against.

Mitchell is feeding the now widely-circulated idea that McGovern's alleged image as a eft-wing extremist will frighten so many independents and moderateconservative Democrats that Nixon will win in a land-slide surpassing President Johnson's 1964 victory over Sen. Barry Goldwater

"Image" IS a potent factor in American Presidential politicking

Madison Avenue types helped put Richard M. Nixon in the White House by successfully creating the idea that a "new Nixon" had developed, an idea that now seems slightly justified in his foreign policy performance although his domestic policies are very much the products of the old Nixon.

Hubert H. Humphrey is one of the finest hardest-working, most imaginative men ever to serve in the Senate. His mark is on much of the most progressive legislation of WASHINGTON - President Nixon's the last generation. But Humphrey could never escape the old image of glibness, or the new image of being "passe," so the White House seems once again to be slipping beyond his grasp.

> But does that mean that McGovern is automatically doomed to defeat by the image created in the California campaign (and among those Democratic governors who think he spells disaster for the party) that the South Dakotan is too far to the left to give Nixon even a strong race?

> The American public is so hung-up on security that most political observers almost automatically conclude that anyone talking about whittling the defense budget to $55 billion (instead of $75 to $80 billion) is outside the pale of Presidential possibilities.

> Defense Secretary Melvin Laird has accused McGovern of "running up the white flag of surrender" by making such proposals. Yet, you take a close look at Laird's testimony before the House Defense Appropriations subcommittee and you sense that McGovern might make more sense to voters than his political adversaries think

> The public may be more fed up than the administration realizes with a string of unkept promises about reductions in the outlay for weapons of destruction while so much need and disarray exist on the domestic front.

The public was led to believe that withdrawal of half a million GIs would free money for domestic needs, but as spending there is cut by $15 billion we are told that military pay raises, inflation, new weapons research and other items have eaten up the "Vietnam windfall" and there will be no money for schools, hospitals, the cities

The public was led to believe that the recent Strategic Arms Limitation (SALT) agreement with the Soviet Union would permit a significant reduction in military expenditures. Now Laird testifies that while the SALT pact will save only $650 million, the U.S. response to the North Vietnamese invasion of South Vietnam has caused a $5 billion jump this year in the military budget.

The public is led to believe that U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war is drawing to an end, but Laird's appearance before the Appropriations subcommittee produces this colloquy:

Chairman George H. Mahon (D.-Texas) - "Could the Vietnam war go on for four or five years now with varying degrees of intensity?'

Laird - "Yes."

Mahon and others on the subcommittee were dismayed. They were hardly cheered up by Laird's suggestion that the North Vietnamese might "fall back and regroup and hit again in September or October.'

McGovern could benefit handsomely from growing public disillusionment with this kind of situation. It just could be that the public is more than fed up with a situation where we maintain 365 major military bases and 697,000 troops in foreign countries (at the end of 1971) and spent almost $54 billion in military aid to 89 countries from 1950 to 1970, yet still wind up insecure.

It may be that more and more Americans are accepting the wisdom of President Eisenhower's 1953 remark that "no matter how much we spent for arms, there is no safety in arms alone. Our security is in the total product of our economic, intellectual, moral and military strengths."

McGovern seems to have convinced a lot of people that he can reduce the preoccupation with the military and increase our moral, intellectual and economic powers. If that be so, he just might not be the patsy that John Mitchell thinks, or pretends, he is.

Far-out Plan for Hubert

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

NEA News Analyst

HOUSTON (NEA) — On the eve of the year's last great spate of primaries, key operatives of Sen. Hubert Humphrey offered newsmen one of the most unusual strategies for nomination to the presidency that anyone anywhere has advanced in recent times.

some detail, assumed Humphrey's defeat by Sen. George McGovern in all of the last five primaries. including those in huge California and New York with their enormous clusters of national convention delegates.

But, says Humphrey aide Michael Maloney, the senator's strategists believe McGovern will be left short of first ballot nomination, that he cannot in the intervening weeks acquire the necessary added delegates to reach a winning 1,509, and that Humphrey himself will enjoy a resurgence which could nominate him by a fifth ballot at Miami Beach. In fact, says Maloney, the Humphrey planners decided last December that no candidate would be nominated by the Democrats on the first ballot this time and that their whole effort should be geared to the idea of a multi-ballot convention.

The notion is unique, in the light of modern nominating history. From 1932 through 1968, the two major parties together held 20 national conventions. Sixteen of them were settled on the first ballot, a couple required three ballots, one went to four and another to six.

Only the four-ballot affair, Franklin D. Roosevelt's first nomination at Chicago in 1932, had any of the earmarks of a true deadlock, and it was broken by quick trading. The other multi-ballot contests were always fluid and fast-moving. The last multi-ballot outcome was the late Adlai Stevenson's initial nomination in 1952

The Humphrey team's view of 1972 plainly is that McGovern, despite his remarkable upward burst since his first primary win in Wisconsin this April, has no fresh potential and no prospect of developing crucial delegate reserves.

Maloney figures that, giving McGovern 210 of New York's 278 delegates in the final primary on June 20, the South Dakota senator's first-ballot peak will have been reached at around 1.258 delegates. The contention is that he'll never go higher.

Humphrey is seen as polling a strong second, with some 922 votes on the opening round. The disabled Gov. George Wallace is placed third with 357, and the diminished Sen. Edmund Muskie fourth at 167.

Humphrey's initial total, says Maloney will include what he has in hand plus 290 strong "probables" and 284 votes said now to be uncommitted.

Curiously, the Humphrey planners do not spell out in specific numbers how he will rise from ballot to ballot until he is nominated - or Muskie is reborn as a winning alternative. But they do say flatly that McGovern will lose 63 votes on the second ballot, 102 on the third, 120 on the fourth, dropping him to a level where he will thereafter be out of the battle

The Humphrey calculations that lead to his unique strategy are complex. They assure no big push behind McGovern at the critical phase, a great stir at the convention among women, young, and blacks who may not now exhibit strong loyalties to candidates, and a basic sturdiness and resilience in time-tested Hubert.

The most unusual of these assumptions is that there is no such thing as a bandwagon, no momentum for McGovern in winning

Merry-Go-Round

Shipping Interests Friends of Rooney

WASHINGTON — For years, Rep. John Rooney, D-N.Y., has held the purse strings of four federal departments with the tight clutch of a miser.

The highest potentates of the State. Justice and Commerce departments must go through Rooney's wringer before they can get any funds out of Congress. Even Supreme Court justices must step down from their lofty perches and come before Rooney's House Appropriations Subcommittee, hat in hand

But the crusty old curmudgeon miraculously is transformed into old Saint Nick himself when the special pleaders

He has been a jolly benefactor, for example, of the shipping interests. Rarely has he held back a dime from the maritime subsidy program which keeps the shipping companies afloat.

In election years, the shippers pay him back, in kind, with financial assistance. For instance, his Washington campaign treasurer this year is Nicholas Pasco, a lobbyist for the Moore-McCormack Lines, which received $14 million in federal subsidies last year.

It has become an election-year ritual for the shipping companies to pass the hat for Rooney. It's too early to trace down all the contributions, but we've located a $250 donation already from Spyros S. Skouras. chairman of Prudential Grace Lines. This company last year collected $40.3 million in federal subsidies

In the past, the shippers' enthusiasm for Rooney has landed them in trouble. The Pacific Far East Lines and American President Lines have been convicted of making illegal contributions to him from their corporate tills.

But the fines were nothing compared to the whopping subsidies that the two companies squeezed out of the taxpayers. Pacific Far East got $11 million; American President made off with $33 million.

Rooney helpfully raised the Commerce Department's requested appropriation for American President by $7 million. He said he thought the company needed it Seatrain Ship Building, which has also received federal assistance with Rooney's support, has made hillboards for his current campaign.

Footnote: Rooney's subcommittee has such power over the government departments that he was able to save Charles Kriger from losing his job in the Small Business Administration. Kriger's wife, Henrietta, subsequently donated $500 to Rooney's campaign in 1970 and another $250 in 1972.

Boyle's Assets - Tony Boyle, boss of the United Mine Workers, is about to be sentenced by a federal judge for making illegal campaign contributions. He could be fined up to $120,000. Despite his $50,000 a year salary, however, Boyle may claim he can't pay such a fine. The reason: he quietly transferred his assets, estimated at $250,000, into his wife's name last December before his trial

Gromyko's Humor — As evidence of the cordial atmosphere at the recent Moscow summit meeting, both the Russians and Americans lightened the negotiations with good-natured kidding. From party chief Leonid Brezhnev on down, the Russians showed they could laugh at themselves. Even Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who has one of the most celebrated sour pusses in the world exhibited a sense of humor. At one point, he offered mischievously: "We'll throw Cuba in for good measure." Another time White House foreign policy adviser Henry Kissinger was ribbing him. "Did you hear, Gromyko, that they launched an SS9 (the Soviet monster missile) and nothing happened?" kidded Kissinger. Gromyko shrugged. "In this country," he said, nothing works.

Secret Quip - Sen. Cliff Hansen, R-Wyo., a tanned rancher who has contended in the past with conservationists, had some caustic remarks for them at a secret meeting of the Senate Interior committee. The only difference between an environmentalist and a developer, grumped Hansen, is that the environmentalist built his mountain cabin

ITT Security - The embattled International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. has issued a special booklet entitled 'Security of Proprietary Information." Beside a picture of a man carrying a batch of documents into the shredding room, the booklet says: "ITT proprietary information should not be treated as ordinary waste. You should not dispose of it in a waste basket. If you do, unauthorized access may Headlines and Footnotes - President Nixon's fund raisers have drafted a blacklist of people whose campaign contributions will be turned down. The list includes shady operators and former donors who demanded too much for their money...The President's foreign policy czar, Henry Kissinger, is quietly promoting New York's Gov. Nelson Rockefeller for Secretary of State...Admiral Hyman Rickover, the crusty father of the nuclear submarine, has never given a hang for naval starch and dress. Jim: "How about some articles on odds in favor or against various plays. After all, you are the top bridge mathematician.'

Oswald: "Let's start with a very common example. You happen to be in six hearts, but the principle is the same at any level. You want to give yourself the best chance to pick up the queen of hearts.

Jim: "There is an old bridge rhyme, 'eight ever, nine never,' which means that you should finesse for the queen when you have eight and play for a drop when you have nine. Actually, the play with nine is close enough so that if you now? have information from the bidding that indicates uneven distribution in the enemy hands you may play for a 3-1 break and take a second round finesse with nine.'

Oswald: "Today there is no indication of uneven breaks. The opponents have not bid and the lead gives little information.

Jim: "It also doesn't matter if South plays the king of hearts or a small heart to start with. Both opponents follow and he plays high on the second round and picks up the queen.'

Oswald: "There is a superstition that if you have singletons you should play for a 3-1 break. I say superstition because that is all it is. We will explain this further in tomorrow's article.

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Managers like off days because they have time to think, recall the bright moments of the past and pray about the future.

In the future of San Diego Manager Don Zimmer there's the happy thought that he's now got a catcher he's familiar with and one he's wanted.

The thought of the past which makes Zimmer's off day today happier was Sunday's 4-3, 10-inning victory over St. Louis which snapped a 10-game San Diego losing streak.

"I'll take about 15 more wins.

In another deal, pitcher Mike Kilkenny was sent to Cleveland for infielder Fred Stanley, another guy Zimmer feels will help. "Stanley can play short or second base." Zimmer said. "And we've been hurting for in-

He tries to play the game Sam's way, get on the green in two and two putt. It is obvious, however, that J. C. is a little tired of the constant nephew reference.

"It (being Sam's nephew) doesn't help in so far as making money is concerned." he noted. "They don't roll over because my name is Snead.

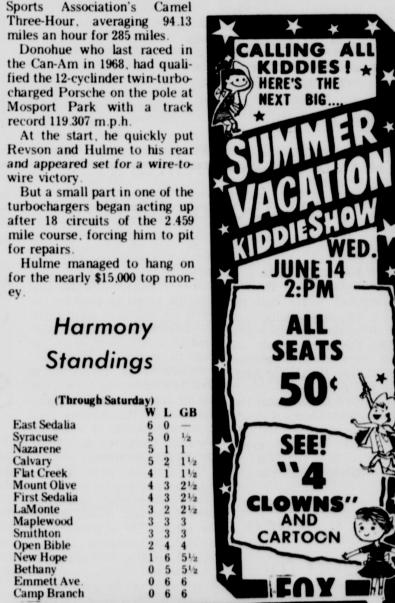

Snead went to the 18th (72nd hole) leading by a stroke and took a bogey five after hitting his tee shot in a bunker, chipping short of the green, getting on in three and two putting. Rodriguez only had to par the final hole to force a sudden death playoff. The 36-year-old Chi Chi hit his second shot over the green into the gallery, however, chipped back and took two putts for a bogey that cost him a shot at the $30,000.

"It's bad to bogey the last hole whether its for first or second place," J. C. said. "It leaves a bad taste in your mouth. You ask yourself 'did I choke?' I almost feel like Chi Chi gave me the tournament.

Rodriguez was disappointed, but chipper as usual, after his defeat. He observed rather cryptically, "Did J. C. tell you that six years ago he worked for me for $200 a month. Today he beat me out of $13,000. Some difference.

Says Choice Needed In Illinois

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) Claiming that the people of Illinois need a choice in the November election, the American Independent party has named a slate of candidates it hopes to get on the ballot in the upcoming general election.

Heading the list of candidates named Sunday is Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, who is seeking the Democratic presidential nomination. Wallace headed the American Independent party in his 1968 quest for the presidency

Petitions containing some 25.-000 signatures are needed to get the slate on the November ballot.

Those selected by the state central committee for national offices were Wallace for president: Richard Kay of Cleveland. Ohio, an attorney who helped defend Lt. William Calley, for vice president; and Dakin Williams of Collinsville. Ill.. brother of playwright Tennessee Williams, for U.S. Senate. Williams lost in his bid for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate in the March 21 primary

Natural Resource Pleas Are Heard

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — Oil and Gas conservationists from 34 states heard a plea Monday for negotiation of a ing rigid guidelines on natural resources Herbert M. Sampson, vice president of Northern Natural Gas Co., at Omaha, Neb., said a treaty is essential to facilitate the marketing of potentially large gas reserves in the Alaskan Northern Slope, Canadian arctic islands and Canadian arctic mainland.

Sampson discussed potential solutions to the U.S. natural gas shortage in a report submitted at the opening session of the two-day mid-year meeting of the Intrastate Oil Compact Commission. The compact was established 38 years ago to serve as a forum of oil and gas conservations matters. Describing current U.S. natural gas supply problems as most critical, Sampson said three arctic areas offer a prime source of supplemental supply.

'No matter what the expense or the technological barriers, means will be found to transport this energy to market," he said. "I am confident that during this decade pipelines will tap all three of these arctic areas but at a tremendous

Music, Sports On TV

By CYNTHIA LOWRY AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Sports fans and music lovers got most of the programming breaks over the weekend on television.

There was baseball, golf and horse racing, among other sports. And there was Sunday night's remarkable "Portrait of Stravinsky" on the public broadcasting stations for another crowd. The hour program was filmed six and seven years ago when the composer, who died last year, was 83 and 84. It was done in cinema verite style. most of the time with the people involved seemingly unaware of camera. And seemed to have been handled casually. In some segments the composer was talking in his Beverly Hills home about everything from the Picasso caricature of himself as a younger man to a long anecdote about Jean Cocteau's three attempts to write a libretto for Stravinsky's music. He spoke of music with the enthusiasm of a boy. In another he was working with Pierre Boulez correcting an error Boulez had found in one piece of printed music questions of an interviewer. Often the lighting was poor the sound was fuzzy and, most difficult, the conversation whipped among English, French and German, with only occasionally a translation. Out of this somehow came a portrait of a fascinating man. It is an invaluable record.

Also of interest to the musically minded was a feature on Andre Previn and his actresswife, Mia Farrow, on CBS' "60 Minutes." Previn is a former jazz pianist and composer of Hollywood film scores who recently was given another four-year contract with the London Symphony Orchestra. He was described by narratorinterviewer Richard Dimbleby 'England's Leonard Bern-

"We felt that somebody had moved the goal post on us," he said, after explaining that both proposals had been structured on what was thought to have been prevailing Canadian gas export ground rules.

"It is becoming increasingly evident that regulatory bodies in both countries in order to fulfill their responsibilities must have the rigid guidelines provided in a U.S.-Canadian treaty on natural resources, he said

A common effort to tap the energy and mineral resources of the arctic areas, he added, cannot help but be beneficial to both nations.

"I do not believe that this important step can be taken in an orderly and equitable manner without existence of a treaty acceptable to both nations," he said. "I cannot conceive prudent businessmen in either nation making large commitments without assurances that would be contained in a treaty.

stand-still cease-fire in which "both sides kept their troops where they are now;" (2) release of the prisoners of war; and

(3) establishment of a neutralist regime in Saigon. Despite the relatively high degree of agreement among the public here at home on all three issues, a big majority still do not expect any positive response to such terms by North Vietnam

c 1972 Chicago Tribune

all major segments of the public could agree — a neutral but non-Communist government for South Vietnam.

By LOUIS HARRIS

The American people are extremely doubtful that a resolution of the Vietnam conflict will occur anytime soon. The conviction that "the United States will still be involved in the Vietnam war by election time," is held by 88 per cent of the populace, while no more than 6 per cent see the American involvement as close to an end.

Despite the fact that 79 per cent want "to bring all U.S. ground, naval, and 'air forces home from Vietnam," a plurality, 45-38 per cent, would oppose a coalition government which included the Communists as the price for peace. Asked if they would "favor or oppose an agreement to end the war by having a neutral but non-Communist takeover in South Vietnam," three out of four Americans answered in the affirmative.

Apart from the question of denying the North Vietnamese a political role in Saigon, the public also overwhelmingly believes, 75-13 per cent, that "the U.S. should stay involved in the war until American prisoners of war are released."

Basically, the American people would settle for a standstill cease-fire to end the fighting, favored by 52-31 per cent, and the return of U.S. prisoners of war, favored by 93-2 per cent, as the terms for a complete withdrawal of all this country's forces from Vietnam. Clearly, however, a big majority do not expect the North Vietnamese to agree to these terms anytime soon.

Recently, a cross section of 1,385 voters was asked: "By election time, do you think President Nixon will have ended all U.S. involvement with the war in Vietnam, or do you think we will still be involved there?"

Involvement By Election Time

	Total Votes
Will still be involved	88
Will have ended	6
Not sure	6

Part of the reason the public is pessimistic about any early settlement of the war is the strong feeling that a prior condition must be the release of prisoners of war. The cross section was asked: "Suppose you had to choose between the U.S. ending all of our involvement in Vietnam without assurances of the return of our men who are prisoners of war, or continuing our involvement in Vietnam until the prisoners are released?"

Ending Involvement vs. Prisoners Release Total Voters

End U.S. involvement	13
Continue involvement	75
Not sure	12

The commitment in this country to the release of captured members of the U.S. armed forces is deep and likely will not be reversed. Opposition to a coalition government with the Communists in Saigon persists among a plurality, but is not as overwhelming. Yet, American public opinion has become more intractable on the coalition issue as peace negotiations have dragged on.

Substantial majorities of the college educated, those with incomes of $15,000 and over, and a plurality of those under 30 favor a coalition government in South Vietnam as the price for peace. However, the dominant balance of public opinion is presently held by older, less well educated, and less affluent voters, who decisively oppose a coalition as a solution.

Prisoners Escape From Jail Sunday

KAHOKA, Mo. (AP) - Two prisoners bolted from a jailer at the Clark County Jail here late Sunday night.

Missouri authorities and Iowa Highway Patrolmen began an immediate search for James Chamberlain, 19, of St. Paul, Minn., and Jerry Kleise, 18, of Montrose, Iowa.

Spokesmen for the sheriff's department said Chamberlain was serving time for a parole violation and car theft and Kleise was in jail on burglary and stealing convictions.
